A Change is as good as a Holiday

I didn't realise how much I needed a bit of break until I started having one.

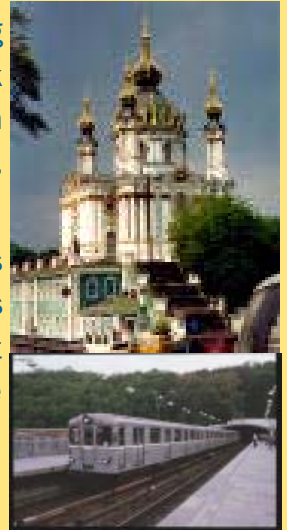

Dad and Mum arrived last Wednesday and with the exception of Friday nights, I have scaled everything back to the bare minimum. It has been great to talk about life in other parts of the world and just catch up generally. It's also good for them to see my life, place where I live, friends etc.

Dad and Mum have been travelling for a few months now and both have had a few stomach problems adjusting to Ukraine diet. So prayer for them in that regard would be great. (and they didn't even try the salla – raw pig fat)

This week we are heading to the west of Ukraine to Lviv. It is my first time out of the immediate area where I live. We take an overnight train and I'm hoping the experience and change will be worth while.

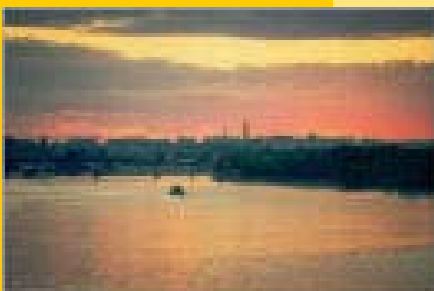

We are having a worship night for youth group this coming Friday (like the 'Rock' at Live Wire). It will be a bit new and different for some. Please continue to pray for God's work to be accomplished through our efforts. A number of teenagers have joined a discipleship course that Daniel is running so that is a real encouragement.

I'm sorry this is a short RPD. The time off is really good for me. I'm also sorry if I take a while to answer any emails you have sent me. I will eventually get to them so don't stop sending them.
