The End Of Another Year

This is my final RPD for 2004 and my last day in Ukraine. Tomorrow I fly out to England.

Thank the Lord for a wonderful Christmas break. I went to Siret in Romania and basically ate and slept and hang out with and made new friends. It was a relaxation I feel much refreshed from. I'm now ready to hit the road running. I will not be in the same place for a week now until March.

Thank the Lord also for what seems to have been a peaceful election.

Although the official results are not released yet, it looks like Yushchenko has won. After so much public pressure to have an honest result, this man now has a huge responsibility on his shoulders. Please pray for him. Pray that he will have the strength to be a leader of integrity.

Please pray for God's church here in Rzhyschiv. We are a very young church in existence, age of members and spiritual maturity of members.

Our leaders are also few. Pray that God will send or raise up leaders in this church. I am excited when I look back upon a year and can see what God has done. Praise His Name.

Enjoy your New Years fireworks or whatever you have planned. Remember that seasons come and go but Jesus remains the same. Wow, that is good to know, and even better to trust day by day.
